NOTH1NG TO HID3

Some citizens complain about being under surveillance, but they are told that if they have nothing to hide, they have nothing to fear.

Still, news media regularly cover cases where citizens with unusual behaviour are put on suspicion lists, even though they have broken no laws.

Govt not to drop appeal over anti-facemask law

2020-01-25 HKT 19:31

Share this story

Chief Executive Carrie Lam said on Saturday that government will not drop an appeal over the anti-mask law, but said people should wear face masks in crowded place or if they are feeling unwell.

"But of course you can wear a face mask all the time, but you have to think about what's best for fighting the disease," she said.

Lam had enacted a ban on people wearing face masks at public events, invoking a colonial era emergency ordinance. But a judicial challenge by opposition lawmakers saw the court put the law in a limbo as it waits for a final decision.

When asked if the government would drop its appeal in wake of the new coronavirus outbreak, Lam said the appeal is not focused on the anti-mask law, but more on the power of the Chief Executive to enact laws during an emergency situation.

"warrant-proof" encryption

GCHQ has suggested that tech firms' communication services should be able to surreptitiously add intelligence agents to conversations or group chats

'Five Eyes' member countries have called for technology firms to help intelligence agencies by providing them with special, backdoor access to WhatsApp and other encrypted communications.

The group has also warned that failing to do so would put lives of thousands of people at risk.

"The Five Eyes are united that tech firms should not develop their systems and services, including end-to-end encryption, in ways that empower criminals or put vulnerable people at risk," British home secretary, Priti Patel, said at the conclusion of the two-day meeting of Five Eyes member countries in London.

EU – the last bastion of privacy

- On Thursday 14 September, it emerged that there is insufficient support in the Council of the European Union for her proposal.
- Worryingly, a day later, on 15 September, the Commissioner commissioned a paid advertising campaign on X (formerly Twitter) targeting the Netherlands, Sweden, Belgium, Finland, Slovenia, Portugal and the Czech Republic, countries that did not want to vote for the current proposal

EU – the last bastion of privacy

- X’s Transparency Report shows that the European Commission also used ‘microtargeting’ to ensure that the ads did not appear to people who care about privacy (people interested in Julian Assange) and eurosceptics (people interested in ‘nexit’, ‘brexit’ and ‘spanexit’ or in Victor Orbán, Nigel Farage, or the German political party AfD).[17] For unclear reasons, people interested in Christianity were also excluded. After excluding critical political and religious groups, X’s algorithm was set to find people in the remaining population who were indeed interested in the ad message, resulting in an uncritical echo chamber.

Rooted phones and custom ROMs

Custom ROMs and rooted phones aren't supported by WhatsApp. There are too many variations in these customizations for us to maintain a working product. Furthermore, custom ROMs and rooting don't allow the WhatsApp security model to function as intended. If you're using a custom ROM or rooted phone, your messages won't be protected with end-to-end encryption.

For the best WhatsApp experience, please use a stock ROM and remove root. Contact your phone's manufacturer for specific instructions on how to unroot.

About Temporarily Banned Accounts

If you received an in-app message stating your account is “Temporarily banned” this means that you're likely using an unsupported version of WhatsApp instead of the official WhatsApp app. If you don't switch to the official app after being temporarily banned, your account might be permanently banned from using WhatsApp.

Unsupported apps, such as WhatsApp Plus, GB WhatsApp, or apps that claim to move your WhatsApp chats between phones, are altered versions of WhatsApp. These unofficial apps are developed by third parties and violate our Terms of Service. WhatsApp doesn't support these third-party apps because we can't validate their security practices.

How to switch to the official WhatsApp app

You might need to backup your chat history before moving to the official WhatsApp app. The name of the unsupported app you're using determines whether you need to transfer your chat history. Locate the name of the app by tapping More Options > Settings > Help > App info. Follow the steps below based on the name of the app: WhatsApp Plus or GB WhatsApp.
